BRUSHES

WATER BRUSHES

Using a Water Brush – Ideas & Tips

A water brush has the ability to hold water, ink, or liquid watercolour within the reservoir located in its handle; making it a unique and versatile tool.

Working with Water

1. Fill the handle/reservoir of the brush by holding it under pouring water, or submerging it in a container.
2. The water will seep from the reservoir into the bristles, making them damp.
3. To add more water to the bristles, or to release a drop of water, squeeze the handle of the brush. Controlling the flow of water can take some practice.
4. A water brush is very handy for “plein air” painting (outdoors) because it eliminates the need to bring a separate container for water.
5. Use the water-filled brush with dry watercolour palettes, or watercolour pencils.

Dry Watercolour Palettes

- Activate the paint in your watercolour palette by touching the damp bristles of your water brush to a block of colour.
- For more paint and a more concentrated colour, you can release a whole drop of clean water onto the colour block and mix it. The more you mix it, the stronger the colour will get.
- One of the unique things about a waterbrush, is its ability to create a graded wash. As you paint a continuous stroke, water gets added to the paint and steadily lightens the colour.

Watercolour Pencils

- Water brushes are the most convenient tool when working with watercolour pencils because they eliminate the step of stopping to re-wet your brush.
 - Simply run your waterbrush over the watercolour pencil and the water from the damp bristles will turn it into paint!
6. In between colours, don't forget to clean the bristles of your brush by wiping them on a cloth and flushing them with water a few times.

Working with Liquid Watercolour & Ink

1. Fill the reservoir with your liquid watercolour or ink. The Syringes found on page 89 are perfect for accomplishing this task.
2. It's handy to have a few brushes filled with different colours, otherwise you are only using one colour at a time.
3. Let the paint or ink saturate the bristles. Be careful not to squeeze too hard.
4. Start painting, drawing or lettering! The advantage of using the waterbrush with liquid watercolour or ink, is that you won't have to stop to reload your brush.

Cleaning your Waterbrush

1. Wipe any excess paint off the bristles onto a cloth or paper towel.
2. If there is water in the reservoir, squeeze it so that it flushes the bristles. Then wipe them off again.
3. Continue to repeat these step until the bristles are clean.
4. If you were using ink or liquid watercolour in your water brush, then fill the reservoir with water and repeat a pattern of squeezing water through and wiping the bristles until the water runs clear.

SAVE MONEY BY MAKING YOUR OWN FRAMED CANVASES!

WHAT YOU NEED:

- Unprimed canvas
- 2 equal-length pairs of wooden stretcher bars
- Staple gun and staples
- Fabric scissors
- Canvas pliers (optional)
- T-square or carpenter's square

INSTRUCTIONS:

1. Assemble your stretchers. Make sure they are square and snug.
2. Cut your canvas. Place your assembled stretcher frame on the canvas (lip-side down if your stretchers have a lip on only one side). Place stretchers so they're square with the weave of the fabric. Measure the appropriate length for the canvas surplus at the edge of the canvas bars. It should be no less than an inch wrapped around the back side of the stretcher bars.
3. Fold and staple. Fold the canvas over and staple in the center of one side of the stretcher frame.
4. Staple each side. Rotate your stretcher frame 180 degrees. Pull the canvas tight with Canvas Pliers and place a staple on the opposite side from the first staple. Repeat for all sides, pulling the canvas tight each time.
5. Add more staples. Add staples to each side of the first staple, pulling tightly across the frame and away from the innermost staple. Continue working from the inside staple out, rotating as you go to keep consistent tension on all sides, until your staples are about two inches from the corners. Your canvas should already be nice and taut, except in the corners.
6. Fold and secure the corners. Start by pulling one edge of the canvas flat. Then pull the loose outer canvas up and over the stretcher bar edge. Once it's flat, and lined up with the edge, staple it down. Repeat in the other three corners.

Cyanotype Printing

Cyanotype is an antique photographic process distinctive for producing Prussian blue monochromatic prints and was used for reproducing photographs, documents, maps, and plans. Cyanotype is a remarkably simple process that employs two inexpensive chemicals and sunlight or UV. Prints can be made on any natural fiber: paper, cotton, silk, wool, wood, etc. To make a print, simply coat fabric or paper with the cyanotype sensitizer and, once dry, create prints by exposing to sunlight or UV, using objects or a film negative to create an image. After exposure, prints are processed in a tray of cool water and allowed to air dry.
